SATURDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1874.

NOT A BETCHM.

[From the Boston Advertiser.]

The New York World has entered again upon a favorite task, namely, that of showing that the expenses of collecting customs are too large, and, by inference from its argument, that ninety out of one hundred and thirty-one custom-houses ought to be closed. It is sufficiently startling to be told, without any explanation, that at these ninety ports the total collection of customs is but $559,000, while the cost is $1,000,000. The most obvious inference is that the Government would be a gainer by discharging every collector and other employe at these custom-houses. Take two or three extreme cases. During the year ended June 30, 1874, there was not a dollar's worth of goods entered as either imported into or exported from the port of Edgartown, Mass. The salary account at the custom-house amounted the preceding year—and probably it has not been reduced—to $6,655. This sum was clear waste and extravagance then, was it not? Let us see. During the same year, when the foreign trade of Edgartown was nil, there were daily arrivals by sea to the average number of at least ten. These vessels came from all parts of the world, and put into Vineyard Haven as a harbor of refuge. Suppose there were no custom house on Martha's Vineyard. Does the World, or does anybody, believe there would be no smuggling?

During the same year the imports into the customs district of Aroostook, Maine, were of a total value of $40,167; exports nothing. The salary account of the district was about $12,000, which was very nearly the amount of the collection. Shall we shut up the custom house? There is a long frontier to be watched, the limits of the district reaching completely around Maine to the district of Vermont. If we are to have revenue from customs, we must guard all the avenues; and if we should discontinue the revenue service on the frontier, the chief result would be to transfer the foreign trade to the points where smuggling could be practiced with impunity. Portsmouth, New Hamshire, is a third case, being one of the ninety where the expenses exceed the collections. The total imports in 1871 were only, $41,283, and the salaries paid exceeded $10,000. But during the year there were forty-three foreign arrivals, and the coasting and fisheries trade brought more than a thousand vessels to Portsmouth. Moreover, in former times, Portsmouth was a large port for foreign trade, which left it on account of better facilities elsewhere, or the nearness of other ports, to a market. All these disadvantages would be overcome by relief from the necessity of paying duties at Portsmouth.

It is so hopeful a sign when Democratic papers begin to urge reform that we do not like to offer any discouragement. If the World has any plan by which the expense of collection may be reduced without encouraging smuggling, it will be heartily seconded; but the remedy is not in closing up the smaller custom-houses, and substituting nothing for them.

The further trial of the parties accused of complicity in the safe-burglary conspiracy in the District of Columbia having been blocked by a technical ruling of the District Supreme Court on the old indictment, the matter should at once be acted upon anew by the Grand Jury. If such action is not promptly taken by the proper officials, it is the duty of Congress to investigate the cause of such failure. The matter should be probed to the bottom and that without unnecessary delay.

A foreshadowing of Democratic legislation was afforded in the House on Thursday in the debate on the appropriation for the Educational Bureau. The Chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor set forth the very great advantages of the Educational Bureau, and gave detailed information as to the nature of its work. The Democrats who not only opposed to increasing the facilities of this bureau, but Mr. Cox of New York said that he was "in favor of knocking out the Educational Bureau, root and branch," and added, "If the Democratic party cannot control the Senate hereafter and pass laws, it can prevent the passage of the laws." This declaration from one of the Democratic candidates for Speaker coincides with that of another prominent candidate for the same position, Beck of Kentucky, and shows the kind of Statesmanship we are to expect at the next session. No policy but that of obstruction! But they call this "Reform."

THE "KATIE KING" HOAX. The Philadelphia Inquirer publishes a full expose of the Katie King swindle, the facts having been obtained from a gentleman who unearthed the fraud. He traced the supposed Katie to a boarding house, and after a long continued effort persuaded her to confess the deception she has been practicing, and to produce the gauzy dresses she wore at the manifestations. The production of the latter, with a large lot of jewelry, etc., that had been presented to Katie at the seances, induced Robert Dale Owen and Dr. Child, two leading spiritualists of the city, to publicly repudiate the swindle.

People who imagine that the lobby is at well of very recent growth, should read the following extract from a speech delivered by John Randolph during Jackson's administration:

"Mr. Speaker, we think we are living in better times of the Republic. We deceive ourselves. We are almost in the days of Spite and Marius. Yes, we have almost cut down to the time of Jugurtha. Sir, every man you meet in the House and out of it, with some rare exceptions, is engaged in lobbying the infamous measure."

The Augusta correspondent of the Boston Advertiser, writing of the coming session, says:

But little time remains before the assembling of the "Great and General Court." I see no change to make in the "state" sent you several weeks since. There has been some sparring on the Senatorial question, but this will all end in smoke. Senator Hamlin's cause has not been weakened by the controversy, nor has the number of his friends been lessened.

The N. Y. Times prints a statement showing that the mechanics and unskilled laborers of that city number about 89,000, of whom only about 16,000 are idle—a more favorable showing than that of last year by 83 per cent. It also says:

An indication of returning activity in business is reported from the dry docks and shipyards. There is some stir among the mechanics engaged in branches of industry connected with the overhauling and repair of sea-going craft, and they have been busier during the December days than in November.

The Lewiston Journal smites a Democratic assailant with his own weapons thus:

The Maine Standard, referring to our criticism on the delay of the Louisiana canvassing board in announcing the result of the November election in that State, asks why we "don't call on the President and Congress to interfere?" We are not aware that either has anything to do with canvassing votes for State officers. When the State authorities have decided who is elected, then, and not till then, the President simply recognizes that decision. We fear that the Standard is getting unsound on "State Rights."

"NO POLICY."

While the New York Democratic organ assures us that its party is fully equipped with a policy and with measures for executing it, and is only waiting for an opportunity to do what "a despairing people have elected the next Congress to do," there is other Democratic authority for saying that the party has neither measures nor a policy, and has no intention whatever of responding to the demands of "a despairing people." The Washington correspondent of the Springfield Republican says:

"Somebody asked Beck, of Kentucky, what the policy of the Democrats would be when they got control of the House of Representatives, and he replied: 'We shall have no policy. If we attempt it, we shall break down. But we can, with safety, undertake to show up the rottenness of the Republicans, and thus put them and keep them on the defensive.' This probably is to be the line pursued by the opposition next winter."

Mr. Beck is a pro-eminent Democrat. What he has to say about public affairs is always heard with respectful attention. What he has to say of the relation of his party to public affairs will have great weight. Here was an excellent opening for him to show what his party intended to do to put into practical operation its fine theories of "hard money, home rule and free trade." It is certain that he would have been prompt to indicate the policy of his party, if his party had one. Instead of doing that he said: "We shall have no policy. If we attempt it we shall break down." Mr. Beck speaks with knowledge and deliberation.—[N. Y. Evening Post.

SHIPBUILDING. The Kennebec Journal gives the following figures showing the amount of tonnage and number of vessels built the past season, at each port in the district of Waldoboro'. It claims that the exhibit shows a greater amount of tonnage than any district east of Boston except Bath:

Port of Thomaston, 12 vessels, 6560.23 tons; Nobleboro (Damariscotta), 11 vessels, 5066.42 tons; Waldoboro', 9 vessels, 6387.72 tons; Rockland, 6 vessels, 2153.55 tons; St. George, 3 vessels, 1027.52 tons, Total 41 vessels, 21,044.45 tons.

MR. FORSTER ON CONGRESSIONAL ORATORS. The following appears in the report of an interviewer who was pumping Hon. W. E. Forster as to the observations at Washington:

"How did the speaking strike you, Mr. Forster?"

"Well, I only heard four speeches, and those were delivered by Mr. Phelps of New Jersey, Mr. Blaine, General Butler and Mr. Kelley of Pennsylvania. I thought Mr. Phelps's speech was admirable in manner, and that Mr. Blaine indicated indisputably that he was a very able man. But I think there is much more evidence of preparation on the part of your speakers than there is shown by us. I don't say that disparagingly. It has its advantages, and gives probably a finish to your public utterances that is not so generally obtained among us. Our public men talk more under the impulse of the moment, I think; that is my impression as far as my very limited observation has gone. There were several of your prominent men I had not an opportunity of hearing. I met Senator Conkling, and from what I saw of him I had a very strong desire to hear him speak. He seemed to me a remarkably able man. So far as I had an opportunity of judging, your mode, or rather your machinery, of legislation seems well adapted to the wants of your country."

THE WEEK OF PRAYER. The Evangelical Alliance of the United States has issued the following programme for the annual week of prayer, beginning Monday, Jan. 4th:

Monday. Thanksgiving and confession.—Review of the past; thanksgiving for its varied mercies, humiliation for personal and national sins. Prayer for God's blessing in the future.

Tuesday. National objects for prayer.—For civil government and all its authority; for the increase of intelligence, the purification of public opinion, and the spread of free institutions throughout the world.

Wednesday. Home objects for prayer.—For parents and children, teachers and guardians; for schools and colleges; for the Christian ministry; for Young Men's Christian Associations, and Sunday schools.

Thursday. Foreign objects of prayer.—The extension of religious liberty throughout the world; the prevalence of peace among nations; the increase of unity among Christians of all lands; the subordination of international intercourse, commerce and science, to the spread of Christ's kingdom.

Friday. Prayer for religious revival.—For the churches throughout the world, for their increase in zeal, spirituality and devotedness, and for a clearer witness for the truth among them.

Saturday. Missionary objects for prayer.—For the conversion of the Jews, for the deliverance of nations from superstition, and for the conversion of the world to Christ.

Sunday. A general meeting in the evening. Addresses by ministers of various denominations. Closing exercises.

WOOL PRODUCTION IN THE UNITED STATES. The wool clip is larger than last year. In Nebraska, 142, Oregon, 121; California, 120; Connecticut, 117, Minnesota, 110; Texas, 104; Massachusetts, Louisiana, and Indiana, 103; Arkansas and Missouri, 102; South Carolina, 101. It was equal to last year in New Jersey, Michigan and Iowa. The greatest decrease—11 per cent.—was in Vermont. Among the large wool-producing States, Ohio decreases her clip 3 per cent., Illinois, 1 per cent.; New York and Pennsylvania, 2 per cent.; Wisconsin, 3 per cent.; Kentucky, 9 per cent. There is a very marked increase of wool production in the States west of the Mississippi and on the Pacific.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

It is now stated that parties are arranging to revive the New York Republic within a few days.

Hon. Marshall Jewell was confirmed Postmaster General by the Senate with only one or two dissenting votes.

The Democrats of Arkansas, determined probably to extirpate the Republican party, have closed the doors of the public schools of the State.

The vacant Russian mission has, it is said, been tendered to ex-Senator E. D. Morgan, of New York, who has not yet signified his acceptance.

A Worcester gentleman and his wife were on opposing tickets for member of the school committee in that city this week. If they are both one, it is of no sort of consequence which won.

Governor Chamberlain, of South Carolina, has vindicated his reform promise by actively exerting himself in favor of the reform candidate for a judge of the Charleston Circuit, and thus procuring his election over the ring candidate.

Seven of the eleven members of the Senate Finance Committee are hard money men, viz.; Sherman, Edmunds, Sargent, Allison, Robertson, Morrill and Conkling. These men surely ought to devise a suitable plan for the financial situation.

A correspondent in Alabama draws the touching picture of an ex Confederate colonel and an ex-Confederate captain so mellowed with Tennessee whiskey that they fell asleep in each other's arms murmuring, "United we can whip the world." A "mutual friend," gazing reflectively at the twain, moralized upon the superiority of soldiers to politicians for the work of reconstruction.—Boston Herald.

A Washington special to the Boston Herald accuses the Democrats of taking a captious course on the appropriation bills. Some of them seem to manifest a fear that the Republicans may roll them of future appropriations by making reforms this winter, and consequently they throw every objection in the way of the plans of retrenchment suggested by the Republicans.

Senator Schurz says, with regard to the Senatorial question in Missouri that he cannot accept a regular Democratic nomination, even if it were tendered to him. His language on the point is: "How can any man with common sense expect me, with my principles, to support the Democratic party? Can I do such a thing with my record—sacrifice my whole career for a seat in the Senate?"

A Democratic patriot in one of the interior counties of Georgia, believing that the civil rights bill will pass, and that its passage will materially increase the number of accidental deaths, makes the following announcement: "I hereby announce myself as a candidate for kurroner of your county. I do this because I believe the civil rites bill will pass Congress and the offis will be worth something."

Hon. John B. Rice, member of Congress from the First District of Illinois, and formerly Mayor of Chicago, died Thursday evening at Norfolk, Va.

can be sold for sixteen cents a pound. They have known it for years, but it takes a long time for such facts to reach Bangor. If Con Lynch and all the rest of the large dealers in Candy from Smithland will come to my store, and bring all their influential friends, I will prove to them and the judge that, if they pay cash, their money for a pound of Candy, I will have their money and they the pound of candy. Good boy! go in the head! Now, don't you think anybody knew how to do it. The way I came to think of the candy business was this: When I was young (for you must know I was born young), I borrowed mother's jug of molasses, and went into the candy business on my own book, but when she found out what I was at, she thought she would change my trade, and set me up in the boot business. This candy controversy is a "compasticated affair."

FORTY THIRD CONGRESS—SECOND SESSION

WASHINGTON Dec. 18.

SENATE

Mr Carpenter stated that Hon. Jalaham Baker had been detained in his Room in the rear of the Senate Chamber, and suggested that he be called upon to hear there. He moved a recess till 4 o'clock, at that time the Senate proceeded in body to the House at 12.15 o'clock to attend the reception of the King. Agreed to. The Senate then proceeded to the President's Room where they were joined by the House and visitors at 12.35 P M. Proceeded to the Hall headed by Vice President Wilson. The Speaker rapped the House to order. The Senators and members then took their seats and when the presence of the King, attended by the Senators and members, had risen to their feet and who then received and standing supported by Senator Cameron and Hendricks, he took the Oath of Fidelity, the Speaker, the Senator Cameron said: I have the honor to present to the Speaker the King of the Hawaiian Islands.

The Speaker addressing the King said: Your majesty—In behalf of the American congress I welcome you to these halls. The representatives from our States and the representatives of our people unite in cordial congratulation upon your auspicious journey and the hospitable reception of the gratification and pleasure afforded by your presence in the capital of the nation as the nation's guest. Your majesty's appearance among us at the first session of the congress which are going over the high road of the United States and the Pacific Ocean, is a significant fact that the visit comes to us from the west and not from the east. Probably no single event could more strikingly typify the progress of your majesty's country and nation than the scene before us. Now transpiring. The rapid growth of the public on the Western coast has greatly increased your intercourse with your land and has thus acknowledged your influence in rather and your kindred interests in the. Our welcome offered for your majesty's visit is most friendly and heartily. The great and declared interest of the two countries will always be a pledge of the friendship and good offices of the two nations and shall be mutual. The long and commercial correspondence of the United States and the Hawaiian Islands has always been marked by the most friendly and cordial feeling. The Hawaiian Minister at Washington, Hon. Henry A. Peirce, has been a most worthy representative of his country and his Majesty's Government. The King's visit to the United States and the Pacific Ocean is a fitting and appropriate one. The Hawaiian Islands are the stepping stones between the Pacific Ocean and the Asiatic Continent

EVEN-SONG.

BY GEO. HERBERT.

The Day is spent and hath his will on me;
I and yo Sunne have run our race;
I went yo slower, yet more paces;
For I decay, not moe.

Lord, make Thou my loss up, and act moe free,
That I, who cannot now by day
Look on his dazling brightness, may Shine then more bright than he.

If Thou defer this light, then shadow moe,
Lest that the Night, earth's gloomy shade,
Finding her hour, my earth invade,
As if shades knew not Thee.

But Thou art Light and Darkness both together,
If that be dark we cannot see.
The sunne is darker than a Tree,
And Thou more dark than either.

Yet thou art not so dark alone I know this,
But that my darkness may touch Thine,
And hope that may benefit to shine
Since Light Thy darkness is.

O let me South, whose days I must deliver
Into the hands of sonneless Dreams,
Wh know not Night, sunk in Thy beames,
And wake with Thee forever.

WHALE STORIES.

A correspondent at Nantucket, having seen the recent accounts of collisions and other incidents in which that former Nantucket specialty, the whale, bore a conspicuous part, gives us the following from among his many reminiscences of the olden times:—

I see it reported that a vessel has been struck by a whale near the Gulf Stream, and another had her anchor hooked up by a whale and went out of a harbor much faster than she was ever known to go before under sail! This is not now in style to us here at Nantucket, nor is the striking a whale at sea as you will perceive.

Just one hundred years ago the father of the late Walter Folger, the astronomer, was at anchor in Newfoundland, in one of the bays in one of our whalers, only a day watch on duty for the night, when they perceived the vessel was going with great speed out of the harbor. The man upon deck called all hands out, and when the captain got upon deck the vessel was well out to sea, still going into darkness! It was soon supposed by the sensible skipper what caused the new movements, and the officer was instructed to cut the cable, and they at once put the barque back to her moorings.

Captain Folger died in 1826, 93 years old. I can remember him well. He was of that race of giants which Dr. Franklin came from; and let me say here, that when the statue was dedicated on School street in Boston, I offered his son, then 81 years old, a place in the procession that day, and to pay all his expenses, but I could not move him. He was the nearest relation upon the island to Franklin!

In November, 1807, the ship Union, Captain Edmund Gardiner, who has just completed his 66th year, was only a few days from the Island when he was struck by a sperm whale, and the ship immediately sunk. They took to the three boats, some twenty-three men, and in twenty days landed at the Azores all well. The ship Union was built in 1795, and was the first ship that ever had shipping papers or a contract between captain, officers and crew; all before that was done verbally. Then again we had the ship Essex, Captain George Pollard, cruising in the Sandwich Islands, some 1500 miles west near the equator. When the boats were all engaged among whales the mate's boat was stove, and he returned to the ship to repair her, and while so engaged a large whale (sperm) came upon the ship, and with such violence as to make her keel and shake like an aspen leaf. The whale glanced off to windward and then two miles to windward turned and came down upon the ship and struck her a most deadly blow on the bows which caused her to heel over nearly on her beam ends, and back again only to fill and sink! This was in November, 1820. And when these men's story was related by letters—their sufferings in the boats, eating each other, and some of them my old playmates at school!—every one was overcome by its recital, and would weep in the streets, for all of it was read in front of the post-office, in a public way.

Mr. Benjamin Lawrence is the only one left upon the island out of all that number, and Mr. and Thomas Nickerson in Brooklyn are all that are left of that ship's company.—Lawrence is 78 years of age and Nickerson 65. They were in open boats on the ocean ninety days, and taken up on the coast of Chili, February and March, 1821. The Essex was an old China ship from Salem, and brought her last cargo of tea from China into Salem in 1801! When our merchants purchased her, Commodore Downs had just relieved Commodore Ridgely on the Pacific station and he acted kindly in sympathy and aid to those who were saved and carried into Valparaiso.

We have lost other ships in strange ways, and perhaps they went in some such way. We had a ship, Harmony, cruising on Brazil Banks in company with another of our ships—the Leo—in 1790, with only a small watch upon deck, in a beautiful night, when at midnight a whale leaped out of water and lay square across the deck, and the ship was crushed and sank even with the water. The men came out in their nightclothes and were taken on board the Leo and brought home to Nantucket. They never saved anything from the Harmony; all was lost. Each ship had at the time 400 barrels of oil on board. The Harmony was one of the first ships Mr. Rotch sent from Dunkirk, France, David Starbuck commander, in 1790, to the Pacific Ocean, and returned there February, 1792, full of sperm oil.

This is the only case I can cite of 175 years of our experience.

F. C. SANFORD.

FIGHT WITH A HIPPOPOTAMUS.—A tragical incident occurred not long after the establishment of that camp. There was an old blind sheik who frequently crawled down to visit the new-comers. One day he was returning with his son, when the canoe was charged by an angry hippopotamus. Seizing the frail bark at the end where the sheik was sitting, the monster crushed it to fragments between his ponderous jaws, and so crushed and lacerated the poor old man that, although rescued by his comrades, who hastened to his assistance, he died during the night. The hippopotamuses were often the source of great annoyance, and sometimes of danger, to the expedition. One beautiful moonlight night, when the flotilla was quietly at anchor in a lake close to the White Nile, one of these monsters made a most determined attack upon the dahabeeah belonging to Sir Samuel. The vessel was close to a mud bank covered with high grass, and about thirty yards astern of her was a shallow part of the lake about three feet deep. A light boat of zinc was full of strips of hippopotamus flesh, and the dingy was fastened alongside. Every one soundly sleeping, when, says Sir Samuel, "I was suddenly awakened by a tremendous splashing close to the dahabeeah, accompanied by the hoarse wild snorting of a furious hippopotamus. I jumped up, and immediately perceived a hippo, which was apparently about to attack the vessel. My servant, Suleiman, was sleeping next to the cabin door. I called to him for a rifle. Before the affrightened Suleiman could bring it, the hippopotamus dashed at us with indescribable fury. With one blow he capsized and sunk the zinc boat, with its cargo of flesh. In another instant he seized the dingy in his immense jaws, and the crash of splintered wood betokened the complete destruction of my favorite boat. By this time I had procured my rifle from the cabin, where they were always kept fired in a row, loaded and ready for action, with bags of breech-loading ammunition on the same shelf. The movements of the animal were so rapid as he charged and plunged alternately beneath the water in a cloud of foam and wave, that it was impossible to aim correctly at the small but fatal spot upon the head. The moon was extremely bright and presently as he charged straight at the dahabeeah I stopped him with a No. 8 Reilly shell. To my surprise, he soon recovered, and again commenced the attack. I fired shot after shot at him without apparent effect. The dahabeeah rocked about upon the waves raised by the efforts of so large an animal. This movement rendered the aim uncertain. At length, apparently badly wounded, he retired to the high grass. There he lay by the bank, at about twenty-five yards distance, snorting and blowing."

Thinking the creature must be dying, Sir Samuel went to bed, but in about half an hour was awakened again by another furious charge. A rifle-ball in the head rolled the monster over, and he floated helplessly down stream. This time he surely must be dead. To the amazement of all, he presently recovered, and only gave up after receiving several bullets in his body. On the following morning a post-mortem examination showed that he had received three shots in the flank and shoulder; four in the head; one of which had broken his lower jaw; another had passed through his tongue, and passing downward, had cut out one of his large tusks. Such determined and unprovoked fury as was exhibited by this animal had never been witnessed—he appeared to be raving mad. His body was a mass of frightful scars, the result of continual conflicts with bulls of his own species. Some of these wounds were still unhealed. There was one scar about two feet in length, and about two inches below the level of the surface skin, upon the flank. He was evidently a character of the worst description, but whose madness rendered him callous to all punishment. The attack upon the vessel was probably induced by the smell of raw hippopotamus flesh, which was hung in long strips about the rigging, and with which the zinc boat was filled. The dead hippopotamus that was floating astern lashed to the dahabeeah had not been molested.—From "Ismailia," by S. S. COXANE, in Harper's Magazine for January.
